

iding on programs for the try's poor.

British Prime Minister David
Cameron and prominent politicommunity is ready to support Pakistan in its efforts to tackle northwest Pakistan, shot Malala in the head and shoulder on Oct.

"It shows that the bullet did not hit her in the head."

Malala Yousufzai

TIMES GALLERY

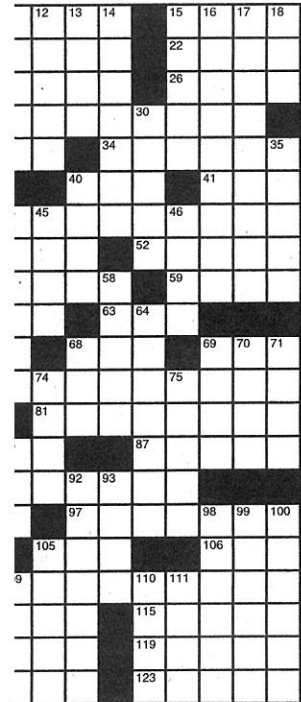

- 90 Counterbalances
- 91 Muslim mystic
- 92 Humble pie eater
- 93 Really digging
- 98 He played Uncle Albert in "Mary Poppins"
- 99 Like many company cars
- 100 Two-time '70s Stanley Cup champs
- 102 Mondale and Quayle, once
- 103 Hollowed out
- 104 Logical prefix
- 105 Garbo, for one
- 108 Kind of review
- 109 "L'immoraliste" author
- 110 Brings home
- 111 Collage application
- 112 Yakety-yak

U.S. Ambassador John Roos (center) stands with a cardboard cutout of U.S. President Barack Obama and students from Tokyo Metropolitan Oshukan Secondary Education School students during an event to celebrate the 2012 U.S. presidential election with a mock election at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo on Nov. 7. YOSHIKI MIURA

The Japan Spanish Society honors the seven winners of the recent 47th All-Japan Spanish Speech Contest during a ceremony at its office in Tokyo on Nov. 3. Pictured are honorary patron Princess Takamado (front row, fifth from left), winner Sachiyo Tatebe with the Prince Takamado Cup and the judges (from left) Antonio Ruiz Tinoco; Anunciata Ezeza; the Spanish ambassador's wife, Romana Sadurska de Navarro; Spanish Ambassador Miguel A. Navarro; Mexican Deputy Ambassador Elia Sosa; and Chilean Minister Counselor Patricio Becker. THE JAPAN SPANISH SOCIETY

Solution is in today's paper.

Chris Pearce (left photo, second from left), director of The Joy of Sake, an organization that holds the largest sake-tasting event outside Japan, is joined by sake industry officials and Yoshihiro Okamoto (left photo, center), vice chairman of the Japan Sake and Shochu Makers Association, during a "kagamiwari" sake barrel-breaking ceremony to kick off a tasting event at the TOC Building in Tokyo on Nov. 6. Right: During the event, winners of the 2012 U.S. National Sake Appraisal held in Honolulu in July were honored, including Atsuhide Kato (right photo, left), president of sake maker Katoukichibee Shoten, who is given the Top Gold Award for its Born: Dreams Come True "daiginjo" brand from Yumi Ozaki, president of the U.S. National Sake Appraisal. YOSHIKI MIURA